"SPARSA COLLIGO"

Uniting what is dispersed

This Latin motto highlights the inherent value of the ability to combine separate things. Climate change has found us unprepared, fragmented, dispersed, unable to plan sustainable development for our planet. An unprecedented adaptation is needed: the human species must build an equal balance with other species and the whole world. Only an awareness of being one species among many, in a common home, will allow the whole of humanity to have sustainable relationships with all ecosystems and respect for all cultural diversities. Our proposal shows strings of different colors, which represent the individual paths which, while crossing, never come into contact with each other and then arrive at a network of connections and harmonic relationships. The visitor following a single-colored rope can move starting from the tangle and reach a space where colors, ropes, planes and intersections are connected creating a three-dimensional network that symbolizes human relationships with everything around us. The movement from a tangled space to a harmonious space affirms that nature is no longer a construction of man, but a common path.
