

CROSSING

Boundaries, often unseen, shape our experiences and perceptions. Some are tangible, while others are more elusive, existing as mental or societal constraints.

This garden explores these intangible boundaries through a physical manifestation. A narrow gap, forming a path through the boundary, connects two seating areas. When both seats are occupied, a fog fills the gap, making the boundary visible and tangible. This interaction invites people to experience the sensation of a boundary, its impact on perception, and the emotional responses it evokes.

By blurring the lines between reality and illusion, this garden aims to challenge perceptions, evoke emotions, and foster reflection. It prompts visitors to consider their own experiences with boundaries, stimulating discussions about personal limitations, societal norms, and interpersonal relationships.

Suggested plants:

Little Bluestem
(Schizachyrium scoparium)

creeping velvet grass
(Holcus mollis 'Albovariegatus')

Sweet Viburnum
(Viburnum odoratissimum)

Isometric and Elevation Diagram

View: Crossing the invisible line

View: In between filled with fog when both occupied