

COCOON OF CONVERGENCE

“Cocoon of Convergence” stands as an immersive installation, inviting contemplation on the nature of borders—both physical and metaphorical. At its center is an organic structure, crafted from spray-in-place hempcrete, partially plastered to reveal the cycles of preservation and degradation. The flowing shapes, formed using fabric molds, echo the beauty of nature and the essence of transformation.

Surrounding this cocoon, live industrial hemp plants rise like resilient sentinels, camouflaging and concealing the interior haven. They beckon you to reflect on the interconnectedness of life. Step inside, and you'll find a serene atmosphere enriched by soft acoustics. Benches made from hemp offer a place to rest, while a floor layered with hemp mulch invites you to engage your senses.

As you interact with the growing hemp, you are encouraged to challenge your preconceived notions about this versatile material. The cocoon becomes a nurturing space for personal growth, illustrating how barriers can evolve into bridges of understanding. “Cocoon of Convergence” nurtures a commitment to sustainability and invites reflection on the potential for growth within us all.
