

ALTERSCAPE

ALTERSCAPE transforms a fragment of the Parc National de la Jacques-Cartier's geography into an immersive experience. Using the real topography of Pont Sautauriski as a model, the installation compresses the vast mountain landscape into a reduced, walkable terrain. The result is a garden that distorts scale - where mountains become mounds, valleys become paths, and visitors feel suspended between reality and its reflection.

The new topography is shaped and held by corrugated aluminum sheets, all cut to the same height. Flexible and recyclable, they bend to the soft curves of the extruded relief, forming an enclosure that mirrors the surrounding garden. Their reflective surface multiplies colors, catching sunlight, leaves, and motion - an ever-changing shimmer that encloses the interior in an enigmatic glow.

Inside, a graphical pattern enhances the perception of depth, amplifying the contrast of the Canadian flora. ALTERSCAPE is more than a garden or a path, it is a fully immersive experience - a place where scale dissolves and nature appears as a living painting, a parallel dimension of color, reflection and shifting perception.
