

The Inner Garden

Firstly, its design combines various natural materials on the ground with colorful plastic strings suspended above. At the center lies a small box garden filled with lush herbs and flowering shrubs, surrounded by an open space above. The different ground materials symbolize the environmental challenges we face today — natural disasters, climate change, and the greenhouse effect — showing how our environment is transforming. The vibrant garden box in the middle and the clear space above serve as a reminder for people to protect the environment, plant more trees, and care for the natural landscape through our own actions.

Secondly, the garden reflects the human experience. In today's fast-paced and demanding life, people often go through difficult, uneven paths while striving to meet expectations. This garden encourages a "sensitive turn" inward — to slow down, reconnect with oneself, and nurture inner peace. It reminds us to find calm amid chaos, to heal emotionally, and to care for our own well-being and the well-being of our loved ones.

The ground materials symbolize life's changing and uneven paths. The colorful strings reflect our busy, chaotic lives. At the center, the lush garden box offers a peaceful space to pause, breathe, and enjoy life.

List of plants and materials:

1. Aluminum as construction material.
2. Wood as a structural material for flooring.
3. Eco-friendly nylon threads crafted from recycled waste.

- Phlox Subulata
- Rosa sp.
- Sedum sp.
- Astilbe chinensis
- Phlox paniculata
- Hydrangea arborescens `Annabelle`

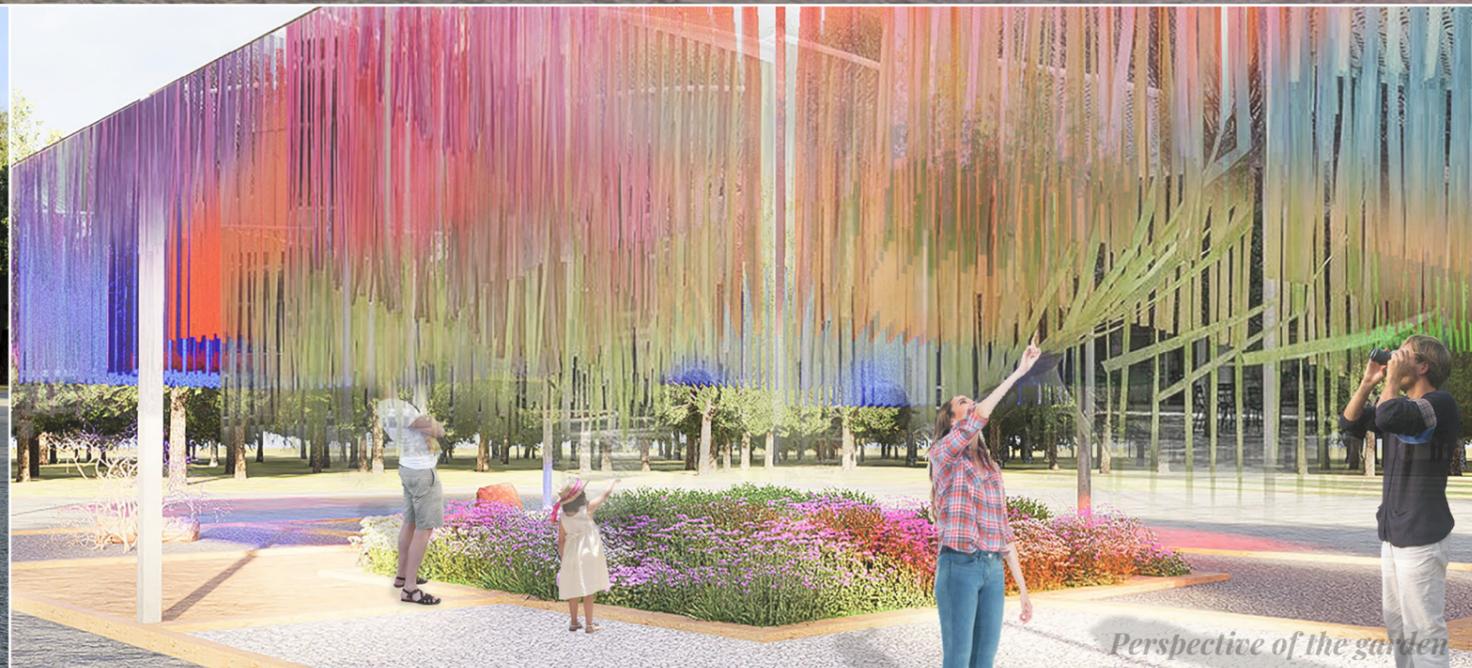

Creating an empty square space in the middle of the strings symbolizes a moment of peace amid the hustle and bustle of life. This empty space represents inner calm — a reminder to pause, turn your sensitivity inward, heal, and take care of yourself while appreciating the simple joys of life.
